

Report Preparation

Lessons learned, challenges faced, and successes earned.

How do you tell your story?

Grant reports are an opportunity for your organization to share how its work has made an impact. Even if the project was not completed as originally proposed, a well-crafted report can share how failures or mistakes are improving the base of knowledge to launch more successful work in the future.

While there may be more pressure to craft a “perfect” proposal, a well-written report can be just as valuable. Some funders use reports to consider future funding or possible partnerships with organizations. Make sure that this part of the grant cycle receives the attention it deserves.

Our report preparation can include:

- Initial meeting to discuss your needs and goals
- Your organization sends any information on project goals including numbers reached, products created, and evaluation results
- Our consultants meet with participants, partners, staff, etc. to collect stories
- Our consultants write a narrative based on the funder’s report questions
- We visually represent data to showcase project results
- We create or reformat your attachments requested by the funder if necessary
- If you already have a written report, we can also review and suggest edits
- You work with our consultants to provide feedback to get the product you want

What value can Viriditas Consulting add to your report?

Our consultants are masters at telling a story. We take the time to understand what was accomplished, what obstacles your project faced, and how your organization will continue to grow from the lessons it learned. Alleviate the stress of compiling a report by delegating it to professionals. Viriditas Consulting will work with you to write a transparent story that sets your organization in a positive light.

To set up your initial meeting or ask questions, please contact:

Jennifer Dumlao
Jennifer@ViriditasGrants.com
(512) 598 - 0232